Statement of significance: Contributing. A prominent sight in the district landscape, able to be seen from quite a few kilometres away due to its immense size. It continues as a major centre in the grain industry, storing grain brought in, not just locally, but from all the branch lines that radiate from Temora.

Historical notes of provenance: This is one of a small number of such storages erected at strategic sites in relation to the wheat belt and the rail system. This complex occupies a site beside the rail line to Sydney or Melbourne, drawing on grain collected or stored in smaller silos along the branch lines that radiate from Temora and beyond, (the Griffith-Hillston line, Lake Cargelligo line, Burcher line, Rankins Springs line).
