

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.

To provide greater flexibility in the management and use of Council's property portfolio, Council is proposing all its 'community' land holdings be classified as 'operational' lands. The legislative requirements set down for the administration of community lands are onerous, restrictive and result in additional cost and resource burden for Council. This additional cost does not translate into improved community or service delivery outcomes but rather curtails Council's capacity to manage its lands efficiently. The reclassification of this land will ensure it can continue to be used and managed for the purpose for which it was acquired, or to enable the lease or disposal of the land. Currently Council has not identified any of the properties for disposal.
